Internet for Educators

Have you ever asked yourself any of the following questions?

- Can using computers help my students become better foreign language speakers?
- Are there materials online which can make it easier to plan lessons?
- What role does the Internet play for teachers in an increasingly globalized world?

To find out the answer to these and other pressing questions, come join Senior English Language Fellow Gabriel Skop (Ministry of Education) on a tour of what the World Wide Web has to offer.

We'll surf the web to explore ready-made materials for teachers, as well as sites that facilitate teachers creating their own materials. We'll look at ways in which teachers and students distant from one another are using the Web for fast and even real-time communication. We'll look at simple methods for teachers to put all the recordkeeping of their classes online, and allow for greater student-to-student communication.

Of course, there will also be an opportunity to ask questions pertaining to your particular context. Finally, we'll discuss the possibility of bringing free courses on the use of the Internet in English teaching to your school site.
